

Template for collecting case studies on projects involving universities, heritage organisations and community members in active collaboration

A major focus of the Heritage 2020 'Discovery, Identification & Understanding' working group has been understanding the nature of collaboration between higher education institutions and historic environment sector organisations, and strengthening the links that exist between the two sectors.

As part of this work the group is collecting case studies of collaboration between the two sectors that also involve collaboration with communities. The case studies will be published on the Heritage 2020 website to give a range of examples of the different types of collaborations that have taken place, the benefits of collaboration and tips for forming a successful collaboration. This will be complemented (online) by published resources on collaboration to help more organisations work together successfully in the future.

Please contribute your case study to Caroline Peach (Heritage2020@theheritagealliance.org.uk) by 3 July 2020.

Images to accompany the case study are appreciated (including any copyright statement or credit that needs to accompany the image).

1. Approx. 500 word case studies to showcase the possibilities of collaboration

The bullet points below are suggestions for the areas that it would be helpful to cover in the 500 word case studies.

- Title
- Partners
- Start date/ end date
- Type of collaboration
- Motivation for collaboration
- How the collaboration was formed
- Benefits derived from collaboration
- Legacy of collaboration
- Lessons learned
- URL/ further information

2. List of useful sources of information on forming successful HEI-heritage-community collaborations

Please give URLs to any resources that you think it would be helpful to include on the Heritage 2020 website.
